FOR THE WIN!

Don't you love new and hopeful beginnings? Like a first day of school after a long summer, or first day at a new great job.

That's how we started the Toastmasters year – full of hopes and dreams and plans. Plans for an even better District, an even better Toastmasters experience for all, an even better and bigger number of new people coming in and realizing the great benefits of the Toastmasters experience. .

We worked very hard to make those plans succeed – and succeed they did. Our Club Growth team brought in 7 new clubs by mid-year! We were rocking it!

Our Program Quality team revamped officer training, brought in new Pathways trainings, new blogs, new videos.

Our Marketing team started a monthly newsletter, got us more active on social media, and we devised all kinds of incentives to help clubs succeed and members achieve their goals.

The District was going great!!

Then the unthinkable happened.

That's when I found out exactly how great is my team. Within a week of the shut-down, our PQD Circe Denyer, who had prepared for such a possibility, had contests running on Zoom; one after the other, for all the Areas. People could see by example that you can have successful speeches, even contests, virtually. District 52 was way ahead of the curve, weeks before Toastmasters HQ had advice on how to do it.

We all rallied around each other, and began to encourage, teach, demonstrate, and call clubs, helping them get going in this new world. In spite of all that is going on, all the original benefits of Toastmasters are still there – and now with even more benefits added. Toastmasters always helps you learn new skills. Now you can learn to shine in a virtual world. You can learn to ace on-line interviews. You can learn to run a meeting online. You can learn to share documents easily with co-workers across town, across the country, or across the world. All these skills help you in a hybrid, half physical, half virtual world – the kind we are probably going to be living in.

Yes, we have seen a drop in renewals, mostly from the corporate clubs where the organization itself has a financial problem. We choose to think of this as a hiatus, because Toastmasters is too good a proposition, and they will mostly come back. We will make sure of that.

So – we continue to work with clubs to help bring them back to being even stronger than they were. We are looking forward to that great feeling of a new beginning.

THE TOASTMASTERS STORY

The idea first took shape in 1903, when Smedley, a recent college graduate, was starting his career as the educational director at the YMCA in Bloomington, Ill.

He recognized the young men in his charge needed to build confidence and speaking skills. He developed a club where they could take turns presiding and presenting short speeches. Ralph Smedley provided evaluations of these speeches. He also had them do the same.

They agreed to call the group Toastmasters because the setup was like a banquet with after-dinner speeches.

Smedley was promoted to general secretary of the YMCA in Rock Island, Ill., and started a club there. This one had a membership of 75.

The three clubs Ralph Smedley started, Bloomington, Rock Island and another in Freeport, Ill. (1906) all dissolved.

As Smedley was promoted and transferred to a new city, the Toastmasters clubs he left behind, stopped meeting.

In "The Story of Toastmasters: Reminiscences of the Founder," Smedley wrote, "I observed a tendency among my fellow secretaries at the YMCA to regard the Toastmasters clubs as a sort of peculiarity, an idiosyncrasy, of mine."

Smedley introduced his idea in California after a transfer to San Jose, Calif., in 1919. That club too died.

Finally, in Santa Ana in 1924, almost 20 years after his first attempt, one group became established and Toastmasters International was born.

The Smedley No. 1 Club, still meets every first and third Tuesday.

Business professionals saw that Smedley's approach could boost their ability to communicate — and to lead. Daniel Rex: "At first that started as a byproduct of the program, but very soon Smedley realized that communication is a necessary part of leadership. You can be a good speaker without being a good leader. But you can't be a great leader without being a great communicator."

Public speaking is regularly cited as everyone's No. 1 fear. Three of four people rank it even more powerful than the fear of dying.

In Smedley's philosophy, that fear turns into opportunity. Since strangers represent a threat (according to our biology), he simply transformed strangers into members of a tribe.

They would convey support, cooperation, attention and help in a relaxed atmosphere, and everyone involved would benefit from the experience.

-CONT.

“We learn best in moments of enjoyment,” Ralph Smedley

The ideal delivery, he found, was a conversational one — nothing grandios.

Smedley cited the fireside chats of Franklin Roosevelt and the folksy charm of Will Rogers as superior speechmaking, since they spoke to millions just as though they were speaking with a friend.

Toastmasters is a place where members work with voice inflection, body language and words to develop their idea for a speech.

“The culture of collaboration is just ingrained. It is supportive enough to get someone to return to give another speech, but constructive enough to provide the value to help them improve over time. I’ve been to meetings in Dubai and Malaysia and Australia, and they all function nearly exactly the same as Toastmasters did back in the 1930s and 1940s.”

-Daniel Rex

After 90 plus years the program that Smedley created is still working because it is a program of continuous skill development.

“Education is our business. It has been so from the beginning,” Rex said.

Using a learn-by-doing approach, Toastmasters teaches its members how to engage — through strong presentation skills and by honing listening skills.

It’s true.

Most speakers don’t know precisely what they want to say,
and they aren’t sure how to powerfully say it.

When it matters...

Get coaching from someone who knows.

Successful athletes and business executives have coaches.

It’s affordable. When what you say matters, get help.

Experienced advice is worth it.

Corporation Employees Succeed with Toastmasters

In Downtown Los Angeles, companies are discovering the advantage of having a Toastmasters club within the organization.

Employers have found that chartering an in-house Toastmasters club for employees is a cost-effective way to improve their workforce," says Toastmasters Chief Executive Officer Daniel Rex. "We're continuing to see more companies offer Toastmasters training to their employees as they look to develop the soft skills that many recent college graduates are lacking.

In today's economy, employees are looking for a benefits package when choosing to sign on with a company. Organizations offering Toastmasters as part of their package have a definite edge. What does Toastmasters offer that a company could see as a reason to offer this as part of the benefits of working there?

- Customer communication improved.
- Meetings that start and end on time.
- Effective presentations.
- Self confidence.
- Leadership roles understood and enhanced.
- Effective employee evaluations.
- Managers learn to lead effectively.
- Projects completed on time.
- Teamwork.
- Employees ready to promote to management.

It is costly to replace employees that leave for better opportunities. It is cost effective to promote from within. Having a Toastmasters club will improve the skill-sets of the employees you have in your organization, making retention more attractive.

Your customers will recognize the difference too. When your employees that interface with your customers, are listening better and responding with information the customer wants, you retain your customer base.

HABA FOUNDATION

HABAFoundation.org

Introducing The Healthy Adolescent Brain Awareness Foundation

HABA Foundation is dedicated to spreading the word about the harmful effects on the developing brain from:

Social media

Electromagnetic radiation

Marijuana

Young people can play a significant role in getting word out on these very important topics and develop their public speaking, leadership and mentoring skills at the same time.

HABA Foundation sponsored projects benefit young people in many ways:

- Learning the science behind an important social issue
- Benefiting from being mentored by person knowledgeable in the subject related to the project
- Developing public speaking and leadership skills
- Developing mentoring skills of their own as a result of mentoring other young people on the projects they have completed
- Having the opportunity to explore potential career paths in science and medicine

SOCIAL MEDIA

Research is revealing that social media can be very harmful to young people.

ELECTROMAGNETIC RADIATION

Physicians and electromagnetic radiation experts are warning of serious health issues related to electromagnetic radiation including 5G.

MARIJUANA

Despite the growing acceptance of marijuana across the US, there is considerable information about what marijuana can do to the young brain.

The leadership guides posted on www.habafoundation.org are just waiting to be used. Please pass the word along. Anyone who is interested (of any age) contact Dick Hogue at dick@habafoundation.org

Community Clubs Take to Virtual Naturally

Toastmasters are an adaptable bunch. When issued the order to “stay at home” and not gather together, the clubs thought, then launched online club meetings. This was first seen in clubs in the Eastern hemisphere where COVID-19 began to impact activities of Toastmaster clubs and members.

Social distancing? This meant the community clubs couldn’t meet in the normal way and for many people this was devastating. Toastmasters clubs provide a safe learning environment for many individuals in the areas of public speaking and leadership. More than that, they provide a place to connect.

Noun: a relationship in which a person, thing, or idea is linked or associated with something else.

Connections in Toastmasters is more than the intimate club environments. Before I joined Toastmasters, I was introduced to several members who had been a part of the organization for a very long time. I was awe struck by the conversations we had because they did not include any of the standard “networking” patter. The genuine interest in me as a person from all those I met was remarkable. I later learned this is a natural Toastmaster characteristic. Toastmasters care about each other and love to connect. If a person is a member of Toastmasters, they have something in common with members around the world.

The clubs all over the world quickly and almost seamlessly began to use virtual programs to maintain the club meetings. Comments from many indicate this is the best thing that could have happened for many members. The virtual meetings are face to virtual face.

Aside from learning a new technology, which can be added to our resumes, it provides the continuum of members achieving education goals. Progress is still being experienced during the COVID-19 directives. Members in clubs are achieving goals they started and learning it is safe here inside the virtual Toastmaster meetings.

Toastmasters International is a non-profit educational organization that teaches public speaking and leadership skills through a worldwide network of clubs. Headquartered in Englewood, Colo., the organization’s membership exceeds 358,000 in more than 16,800 clubs in 143 countries. Since 1924, Toastmasters International has helped people from diverse backgrounds become more confident speakers, communicators, and leaders. To find an open community club near you, go to bit.ly/
